September Brings New Programs, Faculty

The 1982-83 academic year will usher in several changes that occurred over the summer or that have been a while coming.

This will be the first full year for six new academic programs. Undergraduate degrees at Salisbury State College are now possible in art, respiratory therapy and political science. The Master of Business Administration and the Master of Nursing are two new degrees on the graduate level.

Another change that took place over the summer was the loss of 17 faculty members, all but one due to resignations. Those who left SSC were Patrick F. Butler, James A. Schweikart and G. Rodney Thompson, all from the business administration/economics department. John A. Kapp and Jack Ransbottom (the only retiree) from biology and George Gray from communication arts.

Very visible changes in the appearance of the physical plant were engineered over the summer too. The great seal of Maryland, which has always been concealed by white paint below the clock on Holloway Hall's facade, was painted this summer in all the correct colors, assured president Bellavance. He said the crews consulted illustrations to be accurate.

Almost the whole exterior of Holloway Hall was painted, a task which was "finally done properly," according to Bellavance. "We have had a number of contracts with painters in the past that all turned out to be disasters. We finally put students on the job and it was done right," he explained.

The communication arts program was beefed up over the summer, particularly in the area of television.

"We finally put students on the job and it was done right"

The studio has some new equipment, making the possibility of it producing real media material very feasible, Bellavance said.

As a result of the studio revamping, the learning resource center's responsibilities have been broadened. Instead of serving only as a resource center, the area will also be used for academic purposes and for actually producing public relations materials for SSC in the form of commercials and shows that admissions people can take on the road for recruitment. Bellavance said the college may try to get access to one of Salisbury's cable stations to run educational films as well as commercials.

Starting this fall, students will find carrying their Salisbury State College IDs more important than ever before. In the past students have been able to get by at a dance or an athletic event where "SSC ID required" was posted by showing a driver's license or even a meal ticket.

This year, though, the policy will be "no ID—no entrance to the event." Students and faculty members as well will have a "grace period," as administrators at a recent meeting to discuss the issue called it, to get IDs or validate old

Graduates Replace Senior RAs

When students re-populate the residence halls these next couple days they will be greeted by their resident assistants (RAs), but not by any senior RAs. Senior RAs have been replaced by area directors, college graduates who will live in three of the dorms.

Rebecca V. Claggett, Matthew R. Hawes and Della M. A. Marshall were hired for the positions over the summer and have been planning for this semester, which will be a transition time from senior RAs to area directors.

All three area directors said in recent separate interviews that the most difficult thing they will face will be gaining the students' acceptance of their positions. "They may misinterpret us as parental figures who will only dictate policies and procedures," Marshall explained. Hawes and Claggett said educating students as to what the area directors can and cannot do for them will also be difficult.

Hawes, a Springfield College graduate with a Bachelor of Science in Physical Education said he thinks one of the best results of bringing in area directors will be an increase in activities. "One of the major complaints has been that students do not have enough to keep them here over the weekend," the Springfield, Massachusetts native said.

Claggett, a former senior RA at SSC who will be in charge of Manokin and Wicomico Hall, said that her spending a lot of time in an all-male dorm might be a difficulty. "I'll be the only female over there sometimes, and since there is no central desk anymore I will either be in the basement or wandering the halls or visiting RAs in their rooms," she said.

Claggett, originally from Hampstead, Maryland, earned a Master of Science in Counseling and Student Personnel Administration from Gannon University in Erie, Pennsylvania. Before that she graduated from SSC with a Bachelor of Science in Biology.

ones. However, after the grace period, which will end Oct. 1, the administration is going to be very firm in its refusal to admit non-carriers.

There are two reasons for the crack-down, according to administrators. David Ganoe, director of the college center, said "It's for the safety of the students. They pay the fees and this will protect the facilities for their use." Ganoe was referring to the concern last semester over non-students using the basketball courts and other facilities that limited the availability to fee-paying students.

This year, part-time students will not be required to pay activities

Meet The Coaches

"Meet the Coaches Night," sponsored by the Athletic Department will be held at 7:30 p.m. on September 9 in the main gym in Maggs Activities Center. Men's and women intercollegiate and intramural athletics will be discussed.

Privacy Act

SSC provides student directory information without the consent of the student under the provisions of the Family Educational Rights and Privacy Act. Directory information is defined as a student's name, local address (if listed), date and place of birth, major field of study, participation in officially recognized activities and sports, weight and height of an athletic team member, dates of attendance, degrees and awards received, most recent previous educational agency or institution attended and listings of officers of student organizations (including names and addresses). If a student wants more or less information released he should notify the Office of the Dean of Students, ext. 211, 212 or stop by room 243, Holloway Hall.

Editor Needed!

The SGA is looking for an editor-in-chief for the yearbook. Anyone interested in this paid position can apply in the SGA office, Room 110, Tawes Hall.

Positions Available

The Flyer Newsmagazine has two jobs—typesetter and production assistant—open for the fall. Typesetting involves typing Flyer copy and other contracted jobs. Production involves newsmagazine layout, resume work and very minor typing. No previous experience is necessary. Interested persons should pick up applications in the Flyer office, room 102, Tawes Hall. Interviews for applicants will be held on Wednesday, Sept. 15 in the Flyer office, or by appointment.

SGA Meeting

This semester's first SGA meeting will be held at 3:40 p.m. on September 16. The location will be announced.

Flyer Meeting

The Flyer will have its first interest meeting at 3:30 p.m. on Tuesday September 14 in the Flyer Office, Room 102, Tawes Hall. Anyone interested in working on the newsmagazine is welcome.

Alcoholic Beverage Policy

Due to the legal drinking age in Maryland being raised from 18 to 21, the college has changed some aspects of its alcoholic beverage policy. No one is allowed to "possess, consume, or be served beer/wine unless you were born on or before June 30, 1964" according to Salisbury State College's Alcoholic Beverage Policy and Guidelines. BYOBs that are open to the entire student body and that are held on campus have been eliminated at SSC. A more in-depth story will appear in the Sept. 29 issue of the Flyer.

Outdoors Club

The Outdoors Club will have its first meeting at 7 p.m. in the ROTC office in Holloway Hall. Interested students who can't attend the meeting should contact Msgt. Rick Maloof in the ROTC office or William Horne on the 3rd floor of Holloway Hall. Camping, canoeing, backpacking, climbing and repelling are a few of the club's activities. A climbing and repelling trip to Harper's Ferry is planned for Sept. 17-19.

SNEA Meeting

The first meeting of the Student National Education Association will be at 7 p.m. on September 13 in room 167, Caruthers Hall. Current and prospective education majors should attend. Refreshments will be served.

Gulls Nest Pub

The Gulls Nest Pub in the College Center is open 8 p.m. to midnight, Monday through Saturday. The Gulls Nest, a private club, admits students and their guests whose birth dates are on or before June 30, 1964. Proper identification is required.

Drop/Add Workshop

On September 6 at 7 p.m. in each of the traditional dormitories there will be a Drop/Add Seminar to help prepare and inform interested students on the procedures for Drop/Add. This seminar is intended for freshmen students but all are welcome to attend. See posters or a resident assistant for more details.

Bellavance Speaks On SSC Goals, Future Projections

Thomas E. Bellavance, president of Salisbury State College, said one of his major goals this year will be to get the new programs, undergraduate degrees in art, respiratory therapy and political science and graduate degrees in business administration and nursing off the ground.

Explaining another top-priority task, Bellavance said, "I'm very concerned that the people of Maryland know what a quality institution SSC is."

He said that recruitment of new students has been good lately. "We've pumped in a lot of funds there and it's paid off," he said, "There's a whole market of students looking at private schools. We've got private school quality here at a much lower cost," he added.

Bellavance said reducing the number of students who drop out of SSC is also important to him. "We want to find out why the students who leave do so, what we're doing wrong. If we only know what Marshall, who graduated from University of Maryland with a Master of Arts—Recreation, and from Lincoln University with a Bachelor of Science—Recreation, has had experience in resident directing in both schools. The Philadelphia native, who will be in charge of Choptank and Chester Halls, has also worked with recreational programs for adolescents and disturbed children.

Marshall feels, as do Clagget and Hawes, that the most positive effect of their coming into the housing system will be that the students will receive more professional counseling. "We've been educated fees, and their IDs will indicate their part-time status. This will help save the facilities for full-time students, according to Ganoe.

The other reason for the increased concern over carrying IDs the problem is, we can solve it," he said.

With an FTE (full-time equivalent) of approximately 3,300 students, SSC is at its optimum size, contends Bellavance. "We have no desire to become big," he said. He added that even with the new college center and the two portable classrooms in plans for the future, SSC could not absorb many more students without becoming overcrowded.

The construction of a new student union is still in the embryonic stages, but the portable classrooms should be installed in October. They will be located behind Devilbiss to handle the overcrowding in that hall.

As far as residence halls are concerned, Bellavance said the expansion of the residence halls is being considered; whether that will involve building new halls or convincing the state to buy private homes adjacent to the college, Bellavance is unsure. The idea of building a new academic building has also been discussed.

in all facets of counseling and crisis intervention," explained Hawes.

Asked how the change from senior RAs to area directors will affect the remaining RAs, the trio said that the RAs will be strengthened because of some extra training the RAs will receive from the area directors. "They will be more confident, professional, accountable, credible and dedicated to the system. They won't be just maintenance and security people, it will be more personal," Hawes added that it would be a hierarchical system, with students going to RAs with their problems, then to the area directors if needed, and then to the counseling services.

is Maryland's recent increase in the legal drinking age from 18 to 21. To distinguish those legally able to drink from those legally unable to drink, the backgrounds of the IDs will be colored coded—red for those born on or before June 30, 1964, and brown for those born after that date. Faculty and staff IDs will continue to be blue.

Valid campus IDs will be required for admittance to SSPB activities and athletic events, for signing up for intramurals and for buying concert tickets where students receive discount rates. Entrance to Maggs Activities Center and Tawes Hall after 3 p.m. will be granted only to those with valid campus IDs. The card will also be required before a student is administered a library card, and before he steps out onto the tennis courts.

The Department of Public Safety Office will be issuing campus IDs during September from 8 a.m. to 3:30 p.m., Monday through Friday. The office is located behind the Health Center in Holloway Hall.
